

The Chancellor's Awards 2024 criteria and guidance

The Chancellor's Awards were first awarded in 2003 and are one of the most important ways in which the University recognises the exceptional contribution of individual members of staff to our success.

Criteria for the Chancellor's Awards

The University wishes to recognise four current members of the University community who have, in the last five years, made an outstanding contribution to teaching, research or to the University's work in general.

For the Chancellor's Award for Outstanding Contribution, the University seeks to honour a colleague who might be from any staff group (academic, professional services, technical or other, including in those in our subsidiary companies) whose outstanding contribution has delivered exceptional service and/or impact in supporting and serving the University community and mission, and consistently demonstrated the University's Values set out in the University's Strategy 2030, or who has made a demonstrable contribution to society - globally or locally.

For the Chancellor's Award for Research, the University seeks to honour a colleague who has enhanced the research reputation of the University through a particularly significant, world-leading contribution to the progress of research in the last 5 years, and/or whose outstanding research has made a demonstrable impact and contribution to society, globally or locally outside direct academic recognition.

For the Chancellor's Award for Teaching, the University seeks to honour a colleague who has recently enhanced the teaching reputation of the University, through a significant contribution to improving or invigorating student learning at any level.

For the Rising Star Award, the University seeks to honour an early career colleague, including postdoc fellowship holders, appointed to the University in the last five years, who has not previously worked for more than five years in a similar broad discipline and who has in this time made a significant contribution in either teaching or research as described above.

Successful nominees must make themselves available for the Chancellor's Award dinner, where the awards will be publicly announced. The dinner usually takes place in the autumn but may be subject to alternative arrangements. Successful nominees will be contacted in October or once the ceremony date has been confirmed.

Please note: The Selection process relies on the nomination form being an accurate and complete description of the reasons why an award should be bestowed. The University of Edinburgh reserves the right to withdraw the award at any point.

Who can nominate?

Any current member of the University community may nominate for any of the awards. Previous nominations may be resubmitted. Self-nominations are not accepted.

How to nominate

Please use the nomination form downloadable from this link:

- Submit your nomination form to your Head of School or Professional Services Directorate/Departmental Lead. They will decide who to recommend to their respective Head of College or Professional Services Group.
- Heads of Colleges are asked to group nominations according to the award sought and should rank nominations in order of preference – indicating clearly the top two choices for each Award. Professional Services Group Heads may submit a maximum of two nominations in rank order. Ranked nominations can be sent to the Principal, via Nicola Helliwell, who will choose the winner and recommend them to the Chancellor.
